Government in Fact Orders 10 Per Cent. Cut.

(By Associated Press)
Washington, Dec. 17.—Every newspaper in the country was called upon to reduce its consumption of news print paper by 10 per cent during the six month period. Voluntary cooperation of publishers would obviate the necessity for repressive governmental action said the committee's statement prepared by Chairman Stearns. Members of the committee said that if publishers carried out the voluntary conservation plan further action on the Anthony bill would be postponed for the present at least. Mr. Stearns's statement follows: "The committee considered the shortage in the news print paper supply and believe that an less consumption can be materially reduced. It will result in the destruction of a large number of newspapers in the smaller cities and towns and in irreparable injury to the communities served by them and having in mind the great results accomplished during the war by voluntary and patriotic cooperation of the people in saving food, fuel and other resources in which you had a creditable part, we appeal to you to reduce the consumption of news print paper by at least 10 per cent during the next six months thereby averting the threatened injury and obviating the necessity for repressive measures in the future.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Olin W. Leader, an Indian who was with the artillery force which fired the first American shot in the World War and who after having engaged in the major operations at Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and the Argonne was still "present and accounted for" when the guns of the war were fired, has been selected as a model for the French artist De Waroux for a portrait of a typical American soldier.

Paris, Dec. 17.—After further consideration today of Austria's requirements for the relief of her distressing food conditions the supreme council decided that it would be necessary to furnish relief to the amount of $70,000,000 at the least, the relief to go forward at the rate of $9,500,000 monthly. Relief was expressed by the Austrian delegation that the total sum necessary would reach $100,000,000 which is the amount Chancellor Renner yesterday asked the council to loan to Austria.

RULES THAT DUFFY HAS TWO WIVES

Court Will Not Annul His Marriage to Julia V. Mullane.

A decision in the Duffy-Mullane case which was heard last month in the court at Portland, was rendered by Associate Justice Albert M. Spear of the Supreme Judicial court on Tuesday.

Judge Spear refused to annul the marriage of William J. Duffy and Miss Julia Mullane who were married on Feb. 15, 1919 at Kittery.

In seeking an annulment of the marriage Duffy, who since the marriage has taken a second wife, claimed that he was pined with liquor and then foretold wed.

The case was originally scheduled for York County court. Duffy declared on the stand that he was lured from his home while under the influence of liquor and married to Miss Mullane on the eve of his intended marriage to Helen Healey of Manchester, N. H., and to whom he has since been married. The decision of Justice Spear said that the marriage was admittedly according to law.

Referring to the allegations of conspiracy and fraud by the petitioner, he points out that "criminal intent is necessary to prove conspiracy and that conspiracy was not proved, that in charging fraud the petitioner claimed he was pined with intoxicating drink to the point that he did not know what he was doing. To this the court says that the mass of witnesses offered by the petitioner invited suspicion.

The testimony of Aaron B. Cole, a justice of the peace residing in Kittery, who performed the ceremony, which was offered in opposition to the testimony of the petitioner's witnesses convinced the court that Duffy's charge of fraud was not proved. In refusing to annul the marriage Justice Spear pointed out that both were at fault in entering the marriage state with eyes open and in full disregard for its sanctity.

Duffy and wife No. 2 have been indicted by the grand jury of Rockingham County on the charge of adultery. The case was to be heard at the October term of Superior Court but went over to the January term pending the decision of the Maine court on annulment. Duffy married his second wife in Brooklyn, N. Y. last June.

MEXICO IS INVITING WAR

Refuses Thus Far to Give Up Jenkins Or Make Reply

(By Associated Press)
Washington, Dec. 17.—Mexico's reply to the American note renewing the request for the release of Consul Agent Jenkins had not reached the state department early today and officials decline to comment on the text as given in Associated Press despatches last night from Mexico City. The Carranza government now argues that the Jenkins case has taken on an entirely different aspect since the release of the consular agent under bail and express the hope that "this case shall no longer disturb the good relations which it sincerely hopes exist between the American and Mexican people." After Jenkins' release on $500 bond furnished by J. S. Hansen without the consular agent's knowledge, officials here said there had been no change in the government's attitude. An investigation of release of Jenkins was undertaken by the American embassy at Mexico City but how far it has been progressing is not made known. Jenkins also has not been making an inquiry.

DENY MASSACRE OF BRITISH TROOPS

(By Associated Press)
London, Dec. 17.—Official denial of the report circulated by the Russian Bolsheviks that hostile Persians had massacred the British garrison of 1200 men at Meshed, Persia, was made by the War Office today. The announcement that this report "had been repeated to the War Office without comment by the officer commanding at Meshed three days after the alleged destruction of himself and his command." It is declared by officials here that the report was Bolshevik propaganda intended to stir up trouble in the east.

APPROVE SURVEY OF PULP TIMBER LANDS

Washington, Dec. 17.—Chas. L. Puet President of the American Forestry Association in a formal statement today urged the passage of the Polinder bill providing for a survey of the pulp wood timberlands in the north-west with a view to relieving the news print situation. "Every publisher in the land," he said, "should get behind this measure for it will mean releasing the stranglehold in which the news print situation now has been. Hundreds of smaller papers have had to go out of business on account of the increase in the cost of paper."

SETTLEMENT OF WAR RISK CLAIMS AND DELAY

(By Associated Press)
Washington, Dec. 17.—Only 23,400 of the 324,500 claims for compensation for disability filed with the War Risk Bureau up to December 5th had been settled definitely. Director Jones told representatives of the American Legion in conference here today. Approximately 27,000 claims he said have not been allowed because the injuries proved only temporary. Lack of cooperation by former service men was given by Mr. Jones as one of the reasons for delay which he said had given rise to innumerable complaints against the bureau. Thousands of claims he declared at the bureau he added, because the applicant for compensation failed to furnish requested information without which no further action can be taken on the claims.

HELP FILL THE SALVATION ARMY KETTLES

That since the last drive the Salvation Army sends out no written appeals to the homes for its holiday donations or winter relief is not known to many. But when the public realizes that upon the contributions collected on the street the Salvation Army is counting to help the Christmas huts for the worthy poor to have a holiday dinner is it not worth while to think this matter over and not fail to put your contribution into the Salvation Army kettle. Perhaps the battles gave your boy good cheer in France and now remember this organization which is working so unceasingly.

Lawrence Streets Thronged With Operatives to Greet President Wood, Now in Lawrence to Cut H. C. L.

(By Associated Press)
Lawrence, Mass., Dec. 17.—Lawrence streets in which were staged the textile strike riots of 1912 today were thronged with a different demonstration when thousands of mill workers left their spindles and looms to greet Wm. M. Wood, President of the American Woolen Co., who came here as an apostle of lower living costs. His visit was for the purpose of conferring with the Chamber of Commerce in connection with his demand that the price of necessities in the retail stores be reduced. He had announced that unless such a mark down is made, he will set up a big general store at which American Woolen Co. employees could buy all necessities "from hardware to clothing and from soap to milk" at least. The mills of the Company had opened a month. An hour later the workers began to leave their looms, the worst having gone around that President Wood was coming to cut down living costs. Within a few minutes the exodus of operatives left the plant almost without help and the whir of the machinery was stopped. The jam became so great at one point that the Wood automobile was stopped. The crowd cried for a speech and President Wood standing in his machine greeted some of the efforts of the company to better conditions among its workers and said that the most recent of these was the attempt to lower the cost of living for them so that the recent increase in wages would not all go to someone else. The business men of the city at the conference with Mr. Wood defended themselves against the charge that they had been profiteering at the expense of the mill operatives by advancing prices each time that wages were raised. Wm. A. Doherty, one of the merchants, said that they were not questioning the good faith of President Wood in the matter but they did feel he was misinformed. The prices charged by local stores Mr. Doherty said compared favorably with those in stores at Lowell, Haverhill and Boston. He quoted figures in support of his statement, President Wood requesting that all the statements which the business men could make to prove their contentions be submitted in writing, and this information that local prices were unreasonably high was voluminous and was specific as to places, prices and names. Only in New York he said on the face of his figures are living costs higher than in Lawrence. It was agreed to draw up a statement in behalf of the business men which might be presented to President Wood. The conference was adjourned without immediate result.

Lawrence, Mass., Dec. 17.—It was later announced that the Chamber of Commerce had invited the state commission on the necessities of life to hold a hearing here with a view to making comparisons of prices in Lawrence and in other cities and that the commission had agreed to come here within a week or ten days.

WHY BOYS SHOULD GO TO A SUMMER MILITARY AND NAVAL CAMP, AND THE ADVANTAGES THAT ARE GAINED

(From N. Y. Sun, Dec. 12.)

Major W. H. Parker, U. S. Marine Corps, the author of the article, was released from active service in 1910 on account of a physical disability incurred through tropical service, and which precluded his future assignment to this frequent field of Marine Corps operations. He had completed eighteen years of active service and it was at this time that he turned his attention to the interests of "Young America," though the application of the same training methods for boys as obtain in the military and naval services of the Government. Owing to the war and his return to active duty for that period Major Parker's aims were deferred until the summer of this year, when, with the endorsement of Gen. Leonard Wood, U. S. Army, Gen. George Barnett, U. S. Marine Corps, and Admiral George R. Clark, U. S. Navy, representing the United States, the Belle Isle Military and Naval Camp was established near Portsmouth, N. H.)

We all agree that education is a means to an end—to fit the man for self support and useful living. The term "education" is generally understood to express book knowledge only, acquired at school, but it should be understood in a broader sense—for it embraces the development of physical fitness and maintenance of health.

The question arises: Do the schools study the facts dealing with the physical and sanitary elements in education and the application of remedies for defects which tend to perpetuate physical imperfections? In the conduct of cases, I think they do, but by reason of lack of time, to devote to these phases of the curriculum, the corrective measures are necessarily inadequate and limited, in so far as they effect general physical development.

Statistics show that school life tends to develop spinal curvature, and near-sightedness, with resulting complications. The feet being most prominent as a result of lack of supervision of the leg and foot development.

Should parents be surprised and wonder at this statement when they really consider the daily routine of the school boy? For each consecutive month he is for the greater part of each day indoors—at study, teaching over and contracting his chest, in fact he maintains a variety of impossible postures. The growing boy is gradually taking shape accordingly. He is subject not only to deformities that will grow but he is subject to imperfect muscular coordination and slow time reaction. And oftentimes we have as a result the boy known as "the slouch."

All schools offer athletics as a part of the training, but in the vast majority of cases there is no system of compulsory training for each and every student. The systems, if they can be called such, develop a few athletes of questionable perfect development, while the development of the majority takes the uneven voluntary course. Even among the recognized athletes the system tends to unequal physical development, in that certain parts of their bodies are developed and overdeveloped at the expense of the rest. Many of our best athletes are round shouldered and their posture standing and walking indicates lack of proper training for perfect physical development.

A condition where shoulders are rounded and spine bent crooked for hours indoors each day during the scholastic year no argument is really needed to prove that corrective measures must be taken to assure sturdy manhood. And it is during the summer vacation that the opportunity presents itself for a thorough renovation of the boy's entire system. His mind must be cleared and his body developed along lines nature intended; through out of door living, wholesome thinking and physical exercise scientifically applied.

I know of only one system that comprehended all of these measures where by the great benefits desired can be obtained during the short summer vacation period, and that is through real military and naval training—of course adapted to boys. This system will straighten the back; bring the head and shoulders erect; put on flesh and reduce superfluous weight where it is necessary. And in short the boy becomes normal in form with perfect coordination between mind and muscles. He is ready to combat the restrictions placed upon his physical development during the subsequent scholastic year. There are a number of courses open to the parent in taking thought for the boy in connection with his summer vacation, as follows:

(a) To remain at home to be left with the family, with occasional out for trips.

(b) To accompany parents to some resort.

(c) To enter the boy in one of the many ordinary camps in the woods on the edge of a lake.

(d) To enter him in a military or naval camp.

(e) To send him to a military or naval camp where he receives the best training.

The first course, relatively speaking, is the least commendable of the three, as nothing could be worse for a boy than the idleness consequent upon such a vacation in a city where the boy's regular companions are enjoying the benefits of a camp.

The second frequently results in idleness in one of its worst forms—companionship of boys whose thoughts dwell more upon the delights of "parties," dress, extravagant spending and "parties" rather than upon bettering their physical and mental equipment for future useful living. It is not for self support. It is true that at these summer resorts boys have recourse to physical exercise in golf, tennis, baseball, hunting and swimming, but their attention to these forms is purely voluntary and undertaken only if the fancy dictates. There is never present the reminder to correct the slouching shoulders and attention "slouchy walk."

Let us now inquire into the merits of the ordinary summer camp for boys. There are many of these, some of which, admirable though they are, have little to recommend them to the boy seeking real physical and mental development save the attainment of their particular section, hunting and swimming. They are devoid of that plan of organization and system which characterizes the military and naval services and which are so necessary for an intelligent and efficient course of physical and mental training. However, they do offer a situation where lack of good moral conditions do not exist, such as those mentioned at summer resorts.

In regard to either a military or naval camp, if such is situated in a northern climate be charmed of an officer with an excellent record in the service having under him a competent staff of officer instructors, not only will he be such by reason of honor and efficient military service, but who are temperamentally fitted for their work with the boys, such a camp is an excellent one for the boy. This camp, though, must be adequately equipped with respect to proper facilities and military equipment and must offer a constructive and interesting routine.

The best mentioned course—that of sending the boy to a military and naval camp where he receives the combined training in, I believe, the ideal training ground for the boy between the ages of 12 and 20. He receives a training where the methods and application of both services are taught. Drill and routine of strictly one or the other branch of the service might become tedious, while the primary usefulness, boat and motor gun drill, interspersed with the military guard drill, infantry and machine gun drill, make the routine one of unending interest and enthusiasm.

Having selected the military and naval camp as the ideal place for the boy to spend his summer vacation, let us note what his course of training includes before proceeding to mention the benefits derived from such a camp. In the first place, this camp must conform in every respect to the requirements mentioned for the purely military or naval camp, and the course of training include the following: Elements of military and naval tactics (formations and field work) including signal outposts, knocking of camp, knowledge of the compass, chart and rules of the road; Safety physical drill, athletics, including water sports; interesting lectures, moving pictures of the instructive type, trips of instruction to nearby army and navy fortifications, and such recreation as will include camp receptions, games and entertainments.

Now before setting forth the manifold advantages and benefits of this military and naval training for boys during the summer I want to say a word in regard to that old bogey "militarism"—the ignorance of it that has been so prevalent in this country whenever the subject of "preparedness" has been discussed. Even now, since we have seen with our own eyes the wonderful change for good mentally, physically and morally, in our returned sons from their military and naval training and service, there is still present in the minds of a few the old fear that if the boy looks like a soldier he must possess the spirit of a "war lord." And it is still a present obstacle in the way of a part of our younger generation who are treading the educational path but who in their present condition need military physical training more than they do another hour of book work. It is a man is the ultimate object.

The military and naval camp which I recommend has for its purpose the general development of the boy by following the tried methods of training used in these branches of the United States service. Such a training is the one and surest agency for laying bare the unrighteousness and selfishness of a "war spirit" and of the "military method of Prussianism." Such practices do not emanate from the use of no military training and preparedness, but from the abuse thereof. As a matter of fact the more one learns of military requirements under any system the stronger one stands upon the "principles of right, law and order." Military training along lines of that of our military and naval services does not develop sturdy manhood and teaches the military virtues which should characterize the young citizen.

and acquire a spirit of self-reliance and self support and usefulness as a citizen the boy learns, too, how to defend these principles if need there be, what a great factor he is in securing the safety and maintenance of all he holds nearest and dearest—country, home and self.

Let us now analyze the methods used and results of the training at a military and naval camp and note the moral purpose and benefits derived as well as those dealing with the physical side. For an example of these I will briefly set forth the activities at the Belle Isle Camp.

The camp, which is situated on an island (connected by bridge with mainland) in Little Harbor, two miles from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, was opened on July 1, 1919. On that day the boys (will be referred to as students) arrived from all over the eastern section of the country—they having been met by camp representatives in Boston and Portsmouth, and conducted to Belle Isle Camp. By supper time of that day all the students had "shaken down" for their first night under canvas. The evening of the second day found them all with their military equipment and with a knowledge of its uses, care and preservation. Their training had commenced in the duties, ideas and customs of the military and naval services.

From the very first day an appeal was made to the student's highest sense of right, pride in his record and in his organization. His "Camp Regulations" were given to him and his eyes first noted the following foreword:

There are two kinds of freedom, the false, where a man is free to do what he likes, and the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.

Thus the spirit of obligation was first brought to the student's attention and he was made to realize that every right has a corresponding duty. He was taught to believe in as well as to comply promptly and without hesitation with every lawful order. He soon learned to have an abiding faith in his superiors and, therefore, understood the necessity for the utmost choice of capable leaders. He knew that merit alone counted and he was with this understanding that each student worked hard and cheerfully to attain his place of trust and responsibility in the organization.

Even the opening day the intense interest of the students combined with zeal and wholehearted efforts of the staff resulted in the students rapidly adjusting themselves to their new conditions. In fact from my observations of men in the regular service and the work of these students, I find that the latter adapted themselves more quickly to military requirements; conducted themselves at drill and during recreation in a more military manner and attained a degree of efficiency more quickly than do men given the same kind and length of training.

It has been proven that the same degree of discipline exacted of men during peace conditions can be obtained from a group of boys between the ages of 12 and 20 who are required to maintain themselves under service conditions. It has also been proven that this state of discipline can be obtained and maintained without the same kind of disciplinary measures that are so often meted out to service delinquents. All of this I attribute to the fact that a spirit of pride, obligation to service and concerted effort is more readily attained through the enthusiasm of the youthful mind to the military art.

The honor system was in force and the orders and regulations were carried out by the boys themselves. Although there were now and then infractions of the regulations there was never a case of vicious disregard of orders. Good conduct was never a result of fear of punishment, but rather born of the ever present principle of doing right because it is right.

During the first two weeks great stress was placed on physical condition and development. Setting-up exercises, bayonet drill, swimming and athletic games soon had the desired effect.

Although the students performed as regular tour of sentry duty (it occupying too much time), still they were instructed in the "Manual of Guard Duty," performing all the duties on a drill three times a week. The "Guard of the Day," though, was detailed and inspected each day and it rendered honors to military visitors and others entitled to receive them and at colors in the morning and regiment in the evening. From this instruction the students learned to accept responsibility and to render implicit obedience to a lawful order. And, too, a spirit of patriotism was nourished and fortified.

Such rapid progress was made in the primary drills, formations, manual of arms, signals, etc., which, by the way, bring out the qualities of alertness, promptness and persistence, that the third week found the students in field maneuvers as infantry and machine gun units. Patrol, advance guard and outpost work was taught and finally problems in these field exercises were solved and carried out by the students themselves. In working out these problems the student saw for himself the qualities required for leadership. And what are these qualities? They do not intelligently compare and contrast, but rather arrive at a proper conclusion and reduce the result to an intelligent, brief order for compliance with. This judgment, also to merit the confidence of these under orders. In other words, such instruction teaches the boy to reason intelligently and quickly, to be self-reliant and courageous.

OCCUPANTS TAKEN DOWN LADDERS

(By Associated Press)

Nashua, N. H., Dec. 16.—Firemen and police worked in a temperature near zero this evening to rescue the occupants of the Charles block, which was filled with smoke from a fire on the lower floor. Many of the occupants of the apartments, some old ladies, were taken down ladders and other ways the stairways. While many were overcome by the smoke, they are not in a serious condition. The fire was checked after burning a restaurant and grocery store. The loss will not be more than $5,000.

Daily inspections were made of the quarters and entire camp, all of which produced a spirit of cleanliness between tent occupants and rivals. The camp was kept in perfect sanitary condition at all times and the waterhouse was "highways" a boy living in the midst of such system would never again before he had been so inclined, want to live in disorder and confusion. He earns that everything for its proper place.

The surest method of creating pride in personal neatness is to give the boy wearing apparel of which he need never be ashamed. At Belle Isle there were four different uniforms and each was intended for a special occasion. For instance, in rainy weather it was required to wear his rubber clothes; for his daily dress which he prescribed the flannel shirt, khaki trousers and leggings; for his naval work in boat he was required to wear his loose fitting white trousers and athletic undershirt, with navy sweater slung to put on after exercise at the start of when needed. For dress occasion he was provided with a uniform of "breast green serge," collar blouse, breeches of the same material, and with his wrapped puttees and overgaiters the student knew that he made not only a most neat and so pretty appearance, but he, too, knew that this uniform was distinctive of the camp, whose good name was in his keeping by his attention to neatness, carriage and good behavior.

Although mentioned last, the naval life of the instruction was an interesting source of interest, pleasure and benefit. It embraces all the elements of training that every boy should know. Now, please do not think from all of the foregoing that a military and naval camp spells all work and no play, or nothing could be further from the true facts. No one organizes more than the military officer the truth of the adage that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." The student not only finds more hours of congenial play at such a camp than he had ever before for anywhere, but during the recreation periods he takes part in interludes of various forms. And, but not least, he having learned how and when to work and play, finds being and enjoyment in all going in and out of performing a task because he has to.

On September 7 at noon the colors were hoisted down by two students in the presence of the student body and did not to be hoisted again until July 1, 1920. And I noticed a tenderness on the part of those two students who folded the flag that could only have been prompted by a realization that the were putting away their most precious possession.

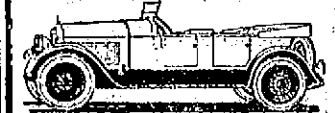

They all departed in the orderly fashion that had marked their course during the encampment. In to pockets of their uniforms, which they all elected to wear instead of the clothes they were upon their arrival, were certificates of discommendation—some stating the rank of sergeant, some of corporal and students first class, while others were plain students. But all equipped with physical fitness, mental alertness and with a spirit of high American ideals.

LUDENDORFF A MODERN XERXES

Berlin, Dec. 16.—Theodore Wolff, writing in the Tagesschau, compared General Ludendorff, formerly Chief of the German General Staff with Xerxes "who after the destruction of his fleet ordered the sea to be whipped." "It does not indicate much strength of soul," he continues, "when Ludendorff repeatedly seeks to make the people responsible for the revolution, which was occasioned only by military failures. He is considerably more unjust than Xerxes." "The Americans whom he had frightened came and the tanks that he had made fun of arrived also. On June 6 the announcement was made to the German people that the 'proud manœuvre army of the Entente' no such exists no longer, and five days later came the dissolution and complete destruction of the German army."

IF TOO THIN TRY BITRO- PHOSPHATE

While excessive thinness might be attributed to various and subtle causes in different individuals, it is a well-known fact that the lack of phosphorus in the human system is very largely responsible for this condition. It seems to be well established that this deficiency in phosphorus may now be met by the use of Bitro-Phosphate, which can be obtained from any food source in convenient tablet form. In many instances the assimilation of this phosphate by the body soon produces welcome change—nerve tension disappears, vigor and strength replace weakness and lack of energy and the whole body loses its thin hollow and abrupt angles, becoming enveloped in a glow of perfect health and beauty and the will and strength to be up and doing.

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

DEMAND HENKES BE TRIED AGAIN ON WAR CHARGE

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 16.—Resolutions demanding a new trial for David Henkes, former captain in the American army, sentenced to serve 25 years' imprisonment for refusing to fight in the war on account of his German parentage, have been adopted by the Henry J. Sweeney post of the American Legion.

Copies of the resolutions will be forwarded to state headquarters of the American Legion in Concord and the state organization and other posts will be asked to take similar action. Henkes was recently released from prison on a legal technicality.

Henkes went overseas with the 16th Infantry and when about to go into the trenches asserted he was a German and had no intention of fighting against his own people. He later was brought out that Henkes had contributed to the Von Bernstorff "blush fund," had advocated peace at any price and had used a part of his pay as an officer in the American army to purchase German war bonds. Henkes is a native of this city.

After he had been confined in the Leavenworth, Kansas penitentiary for some time Henkes obtained his release temporarily through a writ of habeas corpus, in which he maintained the courts which tried his case was not legally constituted, as none of its members were retired officers.

Portsmouth, N. H., Wednesday, December 17, 1919.

The Passing of George H. Sanderson.

George H. Sanderson, the dean of the active newspaper workers in Portsmouth, has passed on and in chronicling his death it is indeed a sad duty to the Herald. "Sandy," as he was known by his intimates, was a real part of the everyday life of Portsmouth. He was well known, perhaps better known than any citizen in the city. He traveled the streets of the city daily and frequented every public building in his rounds as a news man, and to every one he had a pleasant word. He had friends by the score and for forty years had lived in the active field of journalism. No man thought more of the old timers than he and none had a more thorough liking for dear old Portsmouth than "Sandy." Night or day found him on the job, serving his papers. He possessed a fund of information that was in every way connected with Portsmouth and her people. In his death Portsmouth has lost a loyal citizen. His death removes a figure that will be greatly missed and the Herald has lost a loyal employee. His work in the field of journalism will live on for years in the minds of those who served with him.

A Questionable Solution.

The number of persons who are ready to solve the problems of the day appears to be without limit. If these were as competent as they are willing, the country would speedily be rid of all of its troubles.

For the last few years the coal question has caused much uneasiness and discomfort. Prices have been distressingly high and more or less of the time the supply has not been equal to the demand. The country has just escaped a serious situation by the settlement of the strike in the bituminous fields. The nature of the settlement gives promise of still higher prices in the near future, as is plain to any one who can see a hole through a ladder, and yet there is great relief in the fact that this latest fuel trouble has been brought to an end.

And now comes forward a writer in a prominent magazine to tell how to adjust the coal mining business so that all will be amply provided for and everybody will be happy. His solution is exportation of coal to an extent which would keep the mines in steady operation the year round. He says the country has more mines and miners than are necessary to supply its present needs if they were kept constantly busy. "But," he says, "stimulation of the exportation of coal will remove this difficulty. Europe is crying for our coal. There is ample market in Europe to absorb the surplus of coal remaining above what we need ourselves, even if the 760,000 bituminous miners whom we now have were given a steady and full working year." The writer adds that the only difficulty with this program is the lack of ships, but thinks a country that did this country did in the war should not be "stumped" by a problem of that sort.

And this is one plan for giving steady work to the miners, steady profits to the operators and relieving the people from the fear of fuel famines. Work the mines to the limit the year round and control the home market by shipping abroad any surplus that would tend toward lowering the price here!

But the scheme hardly fits into the program of conservation of natural resources, about which so much has been heard in the last few years. We have been told that the country's supplies of timber and other natural resources are being exhausted much faster than they should be, and in some particulars at least the statement is true. About once in so often some one comes forward with a solemn warning against exhaustion of the coal supply, presenting statistics and estimates to show that in the not distant future it will fall short of the needs of the people.

This paper has never been disturbed by these doleful warnings, and yet it questions the wisdom of the proposition to place the coal business on "scientific basis" by rushing the mines to the limit from year's end to year's end and exporting the surplus to keep the machinery in motion.

This country is still young and growing rapidly. What the conditions will be fifty or one hundred years from now nobody knows, but it is fair to assume that they will be such as to make unpleasant the memory of extensive exportations of coal. The American people should be able to devise a better method for adjusting the coal industry, and the chances are that they will.

According to a poll of Dartmouth students General Leonard Wood is their first choice for president on the Republican side, and President Wilson on the Democratic. Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts was well supported and there were votes for practically all of the "mentionees."

A woman is out for the office of city clerk in Concord. It might as well be understood first as last that the ballot alone is not going to satisfy the "women folks."

The State College is turning out "men of letters" at a very satisfying rate. This was made plain a few days ago when the athletic committee "decorated" a lot of football men and cross-country runners with letters denoting their standing.

The coal restrictions are off, and if all are not happy they are at least happier than they were. If the curtailment had remained in force it would have materially lessened the joy of the Christmas season.

ANNUAL ELECTION
GRANITE STATE
FIRE INS. CO.

Gov. John H. Bartlett Succeeds His Father-in-Law as President.

At the annual meeting of Portsmouth's two insurance companies, Vice President Joseph O. Hobbs presided owing to the death of President Calvin Page. The old board of directors were elected and then organized by electing John H. Bartlett president.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Granite State Fire Insurance Company held at its offices in Portsmouth, N. H., on the 17th day of December, 1919, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted: "It is with the deepest sadness and regret that we are compelled to formally record the death of Alfred R. Howard at his home in this city on September 24th, 1919, called without warning from the active performance of his duties and associations as secretary of this company, and ending a most notable career in that capacity, a service rendered without interruption or cessation from the very foundation of this company at the beginning of the business on November 12, 1885, a continuous period of thirty-three years, ten months and thirty days.

At this, the first meeting of the company, held since the decease of Mr. Howard, we, the surviving directors, desire to express on behalf of ourselves, as well as all the stockholders, our profound and sincere appreciation of, and gratitude for his long, wise, courteous and most successful management of the business of this institution, an institution which has grown under his direction and that of his associates from the smallest and humblest beginning to a position of success everywhere recognized for that old-fashioned honesty and sterling strength which was but the "breeding in" to the spirit of this institution the character of Mr. Howard and those who founded and labored with him in the last one-third of a century.

The Phenix Fire Insurance Co., in one sense a child of the parent institution, was likewise under the management of Mr. Howard. It desires, uniting its voice with that of the old company, to pay its tribute of respect, and to record its appreciation. Both institutions have inherited a splendid and enviable reputation, a good business and a solid treasury, which give the most impressive testimony to the character and wisdom of Mr. Howard.

To Mr. Howard's personality, we, the surviving directors, became greatly attached for his uniform kindness and cheerfulness, and by his largeness of soul we were always lifted and inspired. His every act rang true. In him there was no sham or pretense, no affectation, but a kind bluntness and honesty of expression and dealing which made one feel he was in the presence of a great man.

In the pocketbook of Calvin Page, in the room where he died, were found the original sentences in his own handwriting of the resolutions adopted by another institution on the death of Mr. Howard. Mr. Page had intended using these as his guide, to draft the resolutions for this company on the death of Mr. Howard, but his own death intercepted this work, and we feel that it would please Mr. Howard if he could know of this service to his memory by his life-long associate.

We extend to Mr. Howard's bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and condolence and assure them that we are sharing with them the irreparable loss of a good and great friend.

The following officers were chosen by the Granite State Fire Insurance Company:

President—John H. Bartlett.
Vice President—Joseph O. Hobbs.
Secretary—John W. Emery.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY

Miss Myrtle Osgood was given a surprise party Tuesday evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Percy W. Caswell on Talington street, which was a most pleasant affair to all present. The party was in recognition of her eighteenth birthday anniversary and also that she was to return to her home in Concord, after an extended stay in this city. Miss Osgood is a member of the Divinelle Class of the Christian Church Sunday School and the members were present and also other guests. The time was passed in games and music and the evening was one of enjoyment.

A pleasing incident was the gift to Miss Osgood of a silk umbrella by the assembled friends. Rev. Mr. Caswell making the presentation speech in behalf of the assembled company.

Refreshments of assorted cake, fancy cookies, and ice cream were served and all left for their homes later after the most cordial good wishes for Miss Osgood, although expressing regret that she was soon to leave the city.

The Latest in Footgear

From all accounts one of the angel faces in the Supply Department has not yet recovered from what happened at a certain gathering of God's folk's and their representatives in this burg last week. With crossed knees and bright lights (really) she suddenly discovered that the rubber industry was working overtime, gazing down at the attraction she found that one of her feet was protected by a high button shoe and the other by a low cut. She must have been in some hurry to keep the date or else put one on in daylight and the other after dark. Her associates are wondering why this new idea in footgear and why this distinguished feature of the occasion was kept so quiet.

Helpers and Fireman.

Six general helpers and one fireman were called for the Industrial Department by the labor board on Tuesday.

New Show for Prisoners

The Mutual Welfare League of Naval prisoners is now planning to produce another show in this city on a date in January. This production will be entirely new and may be in the nature of a musical comedy. Commander Osborne, who will have charge of this new performance of the prisoners is seeking something that will please a Portsmouth audience and is soon to stage a show that will add more to the laurels of the actors from the Portsmouth prison.

Report Here from Montreal

William O. Hall, seaman, and C. H. Caster, a fireman, reported on the yard receiving ship today from the American consul at Montreal, Can. Hall, a member of the crew of Eagle No. 13, and Caster was attached to the U. S. tug Kilmear. Both men have been confined in a Montreal hospital and were sent along to this port by the consul after recovery from their illness.

Lineup Against Dover

The probable lineup of the yard basketball team against Dover on Thursday evening will be J. Timmons, H. H. Weaver, W. Walte, C. H. Roberts, F. B. Hennessy, J. B. Substitutes Timmons and Kelley. The uniforms and other equipment for the team have arrived and the men expect to make a good showing in their first game against the College City five. A record crowd is expected owing to the proceeds going to the Salvation Army Christmas fund.

OUR DUTY TO MANKIND

Having put our hand to life's moving plow

We must watch the coultter and shear
And see that the mould board is turning true

The fallow for each fall year.

We cannot live in a house of this glass
And at other men throw stones.

Whatever our work or allotted task
Must be done without signs or groans

Let us do our part and do it well
As a nation young and strong

We must scale the highest mountain peak
And meet the world's new dawn.

Don't discourage any one's trying to rise
Himself from the common clay

Help all you can and in doing this
You will help the world each day.

LIQUORS MUST BE MOVED FROM CLUBS

Boston, Dec. 17.—Members of country clubs, golf clubs and other social organizations, who have made a practice of storing liquor at the clubhouses will have to move their stocks before Jan. 15 or deal with the agents of the Internal Revenue Department.

The only asylum left for intoxicants is a private dwelling after Feb. 1, but under the law liquor cannot be transported after Jan. 15, so it behooves club members to move their property while the moving is good.

Under the Prohibition Enforcement Act owners of "wet" goods stored in other than private dwellings are liable to have their property seized without warning after Feb. 1.

According to club secretary Cornelius A. Leary, club members who live at a club may have their stocks in their kettles or rooms in these cases the members' rooms are their "castles" and their property is free from molestation.

Dartmouth and New Hampshire have been in communication together regarding the possibility of a game next year, but nothing satisfactory in regard to a date can be made unless it falls in November. It is expected a definite announcement regarding such a game will be forthcoming in a week or so.

London T. Nightingale, National A. A. B. two-mile champion and star distance runner of the New Hampshire State College track team, was elected president of the N. H. Club of New Hampshire State College at the annual meeting of the club, held here today. The club is composed of all letter men of the four major sports football, basketball, baseball and track. PEOPLE'S OPINIONS

Christmas Time

The approach of the Christmas season brings conflicting emotions to many of us, causing mingled feelings of joy and dread. The movement inaugurated a few years ago for the purpose of dispensing with useless giving of presents in a step in the right same direction. To many the interchange of presents has come to be a matter of form and is mechanically done without any element of pleasure or sentiment. Much of this could be discontinued without any harm to anyone and to the relief of a large majority. The money expended needlessly could be given to destitute individuals or charitable institutions. The one pleasant thing about Christmas is the happiness given to the children by their effort and expenditure. This surely should be made the day of joy for the little ones exclusively. Their worries and troubles will start soon enough, and every means should be employed to make their pathway bright and interesting during their youth.

MCMILLAN AT THE WARWICK CLUB

The Warwick Club observed its anniversary on Tuesday evening and there was a large attendance of the members and a general good time. Mr. Donald McMillan delivered an illustrated lecture on "Five Years in the Polar Region" and it was very interesting. A buffet lunch was served and there was a valuable entertainment.

The committee in charge of the arrangements were Messrs J. W. Somers, Albert Hishop and Jeremy H. Waldron.

Gets two years

Harrison, for many years station agent at the Pawtucket-Central Falls station was yesterday sentenced to two years in state prison for the embezzlement of $4,071 from the New Haven railroad. Harrison had taken the money from time to time, in small sums and when he feared detection fled to Northwest Canada, where he worked as a woodchopper. His conscience finally drove him to return and give himself up.

Veterans Gather

The New England Association of Railroad Veterans met recently at the Union station, Boston. President Henry S. May, presiding. Applications for membership of 103 railroad men were accepted. A. L. Naylor entertained during the afternoon and there were discussions of ways to increase the organization's membership and of pension provisions. Amos H. Resume Schedule

The passenger service on the Maine Central railroad will be returned to its former standing previous to the curtailment on December 10. This has been done to give the public better accommodations than allowed on the reduced schedule and is made possible by the cancellation of the coal restrictions placed on railroads some days ago. The service will be identical with the earlier service with the exception of the train formerly leaving Vanceboro at 5.55 a. m. for Bangor which will under the new arrangement leave at 7.25 a. m.

The Importance of Good Furnishings.

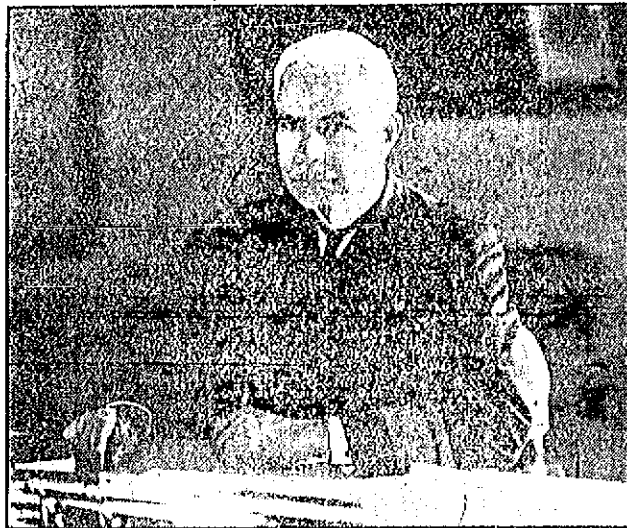

When you equip your home, or when you add to your equipment, you are taking care of one of the important transactions of your life. For instance: how often does the average family buy a new bed room suite or a new dining room suite? Not as often as the owner of an automobile buys a new car. Not as often as many people buy a new home.

It would seem wise then to place in your home furnishings that are of good design and good quality. Not that you need the most expensive furniture to be had. But that which is going to foster harmony and give maximum comfort and service.

In selecting our stock we have had in mind the needs of our customers and believe that you can find something here at Margeson Brothers that will please you and bring you permanent satisfaction.

DRAFTSMEN DINE THE COMMANDANT

Rear Admiral Halstead and Other Officers
Guests at Banquet of Yard Civilian Force

Rear Admiral A. S. Halstead

Rear Admiral A. S. Halstead, Captain L. S. Adams and other officers of the navy yard were the guest on Tuesday evening of the Draftsmen and Supervisors of the Navy Yard, at a banquet at the Hotel Rockingham.

The banquet was in the nature of a farewell gathering of the officers with the civilian force of the yard and it was a very pleasant and profitable gathering. The banquet was held in the main dining room and those were only invited present.

At the head table were seated Rear Admiral Halstead, Captain Adams, Captain Wyman, Commander H. S. Brownell, Commander A. C. Howard, Commander R. W. Hyden, Lieut. Commander P. T. Wright and Lieut. Commander R. J. Boyd, Major E. W. Hartford and the toastmaster, Mr. A. L. Case.

During the evening the draftsmen's orchestra rendered a fine concert.

The following menu was served:

Blue Point Deep Shelly Olives
Mock Turtle Soup
Roast Turkey Cranberry Sauce
Creamed Onions
Washed Potatoes Marrow Squash
Punch
Fruit Salad
Ice Cream Assorted Cakes
Black Coffee

There was an entertainment during the banquet the Misses Marguerite H. Fay and Bessie Warren of Boston in singing and dancing.

Toastmaster Case after speaking for the gathering in welcoming the new commandant to the yard and dwelling on the value of the cooperation of the civilian force with the officers of the yard called for remarks from Rear Admiral Halstead, Captain Adams, Captain Wyman, Captain Snyder, Commander Howard and Lieut. Commander Wright.

The reception tendered the new commandant, Rear Admiral Halstead when he was introduced was most generous. He said he had been here only a few days and so far he was delighted with Portsmouth.

CHRISTMAS IS

to the young man with money in the bank. He can enjoy the holiday without worry as to the future. Those who spend all and save none will never have anything. Christmas to them must be a hollow mockery. If you have not yet commenced to save why not do so now. Make yourself a present of a bank book even if you have but one dollar to deposit. It will be as fine a gift as you will receive.

NATIONAL MECHANICS
& TRADERS BANK

Captain Adams gave a brief history of the fine record made in submarine construction made by the local yard and the superiority of the yard-built ships over the private contractor's production. He said the men present were responsible for the great success made

Captain Wyman, when introduced was given the heartiest kind of a reception. He spoke feelingly of his three years duty and his remarks were of a far-reaching character. He paid the men present and those at the yard a high tribute for their loyalty and flag character. They were the finest bunch of men he had ever served with. He referred to his successor, Captain Snyder in high terms of praise as one of the ablest men in the service.

Captain Snyder was next introduced by the toastmaster and gave an interesting talk and hoped to merit all that Captain Wyman had said about him. Commander Howard when the toastmaster introduced as the man that had made the fine submarine construction record possible at this yard was warmly applauded. He gave a record of the "subs" that were built here since going into commission. He said that they had been in the lead in commission with all the other subs and there was not an adverse report from the officers. The machinery and every bit of work in them had stood the test. Portsmouth built "subs" are known in every branch of the service as the highest type of perfection.

The next and last speaker was Commander Wright and he furnished the most interesting story of the gathering. The toastmaster gave him an introduction as the "sub" expert who would give them some interesting bits of his experience on subs at sea. He certainly made good. He told of how he had off Newport in 1917 on the L-3 with seven other subs under sealed orders and when they got outside orders were signaled to proceed to the Azores. Shortly after we left we ran into a storm. Three of the subs landed in Bermuda, three at the Azores and I landed at Boston. His introductory remarks called forth warm applause. "I had to come to the district yard as my compasses were all shot to pieces and I had to find a man who when the storm broke out had pressed 'dope' to the crew. A day or two I got away and headed for Norfolk. On the way a steamer mistook us for a German sub and tried to 'ram' us. She being a huge ship I couldn't hit instead and the bow of the sub pointed to the stern, and here it was proven that torpedoes will not dislodge when loaded when a sub runs a ship. I managed to get to Norfolk through the ice in the river. Imagine my surprise when I said I wanted to put the sub in dry dock at once and they told me it was on cold to work. I finally succeeded in getting a man to get the keel blocks and we managed to get through the ice and onto the blocks. After making repairs we set sail for Bermuda where we were in company with a motley collection of all kinds of war, craft, and next made a get-away for the Azores." The captain told of his experiences after arriving on the other side and the actual experiences in getting a Hun sub. He told of how the English had worked out the plan of such day being able to know where the German submarines were to be.

His story of the plotting of our transits through the danger zone was full of interest. He paid the English officers a high compliment and related the story of the part the English subs played at the Dardanelles when one English sub sank over a hundred others there and put the fear of God in the hearts of the Germans. He said that the Portsmouth built subs were the best and that thirty not under sea boats were coming at no distant day.

The affair was most ably handled by the following committee: H. H. Fowler, chairman; W. C. White, H. E. Potter, P. W. Marshall, H. P. Bern, N. Rosen, Chief Draughtsman A. J. Case, toastmaster. Letters of regret were received from Able to the Commandant Captain Snyder and Captain P. T. Ayms. Other special guests were Lt. Commander R. J. Boyd and Captain R. H. Brownell.

The menu cards were most artistic, being from the pen of one of the yard draftsmen. The cover had a design showing the various instruments used by these technical men with the inscription "Draughtsmen's Banquet."

The second page contained the program and menu and the last page the poem "True Vision."

The banquet was perfect and Manager N. P. M. Jacobs and his assistants were warmly praised. The service was faultless. The spirit that prevailed throughout the evening was most delightful. Every man went out to show his true interest in Portsmouth and her great naval station. The officers thoroughly enjoyed themselves and it was a grand good time for all.

TRUE VISION

Frederick Moson
The nation's business—yours and mine
By what authentic, certain sign
Shall it be given us to see
The growth of true prosperity?

By whirr of spindle, hum of wheel?
By stroke of hammer, clang of steel?
By busy decks, ear-crowded mills?
By daily food that never fails?

"Not so," replies this dreamy dreamer,
Who knows no vision gave his own
False paradise of worthless plays,
With "Business" a discarded phrase:

But for the patriot brain and heart
That bravely seek their place and part
In building up the nation's power,
Shines triumph in the present hour.

There's a vision deep and wide,
The stimulus of worthy pride;
For in true work true men employ
Life's gift of service, linked with joy.

OBITUARY

George H. Sanderson

At 10.30 this morning at his home on Middle Road, George H. Sanderson, editor, reporter, correspondent, printer, a loyal citizen, and a faithful member of the Herald staff, passed on. He had been ill since Monday, Dec. 7 and on Wednesday of that week was stricken with double pneumonia.

He contracted the disease on election day in ward one, and up until this morning it was believed that he would recover. His death will come as a shock to as large a circle of friends as any man in Portsmouth possessed. He was known by more people than any citizen that walked our streets. He was one of the old timers and loved every inch of his beloved city. No one dared to challenge the good name of Portsmouth while "Sand" was within hearing. His entire life has been spent in the active field of journalism in this city and at the time of his death he was a valued member of the Herald staff. He at one time conducted a job printing business under the firm name of Sanderson and Ferguson.

He was at one time editor of the old time Penny Post and has been correspondent of the Boston Globe for 33 years. He has also filled the positions of city editor of all the local papers from time to time. He has occupied all the various ward offices and has been a staunch Republican.

He was born Jan. 3, 1861, and was the son of the late Henry M. and Mary Abbie Sanderson. He was a graduate of the Portsmouth High School and was married on Dec. 26, 1887, to Miss Alice Perkins, by Rev. William Alden of the Middle Street Baptist church.

He was a representative to the General Court in 1915-1917, and served on the military and educational committees, and was up to the time of his death overseer of the poor.

He was a member of Dunton Lodge, K. of L., for 35 years, and was Keeper of Records and Seal. He was a member of Lancelotti Div., K. of P.; Ashlabb Temple 151; K. of Klaraasson, Manchester; Mercedes Aerie of Eagles; Seaside Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Rye; Sons of the American Revolution.

He leaves a son, Philip H. Sanderson of New York, and a widow.

Regular meeting of Mercedes Aerie No. 623 F. O. E. this evening at 7.30 o'clock at Eagle's hall Daniel street.
